Front End Developer | Google

CURRENT　📅 JAN 2020

As a Front End Developer at Google company, I specialize in crafting responsive and dynamic web pages that prioritize user experience. My responsibilities include working with HTML, CSS, and JavaScript to create seamless, interactive websites. I've collaborated with designers and back-end developers to implement new features, optimized the performance of the website, and ensured cross-browser compatibility. I'm also proficient in React.js, allowing for the development of modern, scalable web applications. My ongoing role involves maintaining and improving website performance, as well as troubleshooting and resolving any front-end issues.

✿ Education

CU UNIVERSITY

📅 MARCH 2009 - DEC 2014

At Indian Public School, I completed a comprehensive program focusing on business management, leadership, and digital strategy. The program enhanced my understanding of key business principles such as financial analysis, strategic planning, and market positioning. Additionally, I gained insights into how technology influences business decisions and the growing role of digital transformation in global industries.

School of Coding

I pursued a technical education at the School of Coding, where I honed my skills in software development and full-stack web technologies. The curriculum covered front-end technologies like 🔶 🔷 🟨 as well as back-end frameworks like Node.js and databases including MongoDB and MySQL. This education provided a strong foundation in coding principles, agile development, and problem-solving methodologies, preparing me for a successful career in web development.
